@skiskamp I will trade a written permission to link to their smut to a written permission from #Ventura to film in a residential area.

R CASHMAN: POSTS

So, here we are: X-Art appears to be filming without permit in a residential area where filming is not allowed at all, blatantly ignoring barrier protection law, and not even bothering to keep all that in secret (link NSFW). And the parasites have the audacity to whine about piracy while being blasé about the sufferings of thousands of productive members of the society, including 100% innocents and senior citizens.

I'm sure, if confronted legally, Lipscomb will engage the entirety of his evil sophistry to downplay the findings, like he did when he was caught forging a signature. We should expect to hear some bogus explanations: that Fields' Malibu mansion is under the Sint Maarten jurisdiction, or that 100% of models are allergic to latex.

While I'm not overly optimistic that this information will lead to real changes, I'm sure it will stir the vermin nest a little bit and make it harder for judges and public to believe Colette's fake tears and Lipscomb's cynical lies in the future.

Although… I take it back: if many people file complaints with Ventura officials, it may lubricate the slow wheels of justice, and maybe in a year or so we will find our pornographers and their slimy lawyers at the same place where Prenda will soon end up.

@Raul15340965 @DieTrollDie Address is CLEARLY a matter of public concern: it wasn't me who turned a residential house into a porn warehouse.
